ZULU KINGS AND WARS. CHAKA, the most renowned of Zulu kings, not improperly called the Bonaparte of South Africa, began to reign about the beginning of this century. His name awakens deep emotions in the native mind. As it is little more than fifty years since his death, there are natives living who knew him personally, and they are never tired of rehearsing his mighty deeds. I have often heard them repeat with genuine delight a song which his warriors were accustomed to sing to his praise : -- Thou hast finished the nations. Where wilt thou go to battle now Hey! where wilt thou go to battle now Unlike other South African chiefs, he was in the habit of fighting in person at the head of his braves, and it is said he never fled before a foe or lost a battle. His name is regarded by the Zulus as sacred, and is never mentioned except to give solemnity to an oath or to nerve the warrior for battle. At the time of his death he had a standing army of thirty-six regiments. In working out the scheme of his ambition he introduced some remarkable reforms into the art of barbarian warfare. Each regiment was distinguished from others by the color and pattern of their shields. His men were taught to wield the short assegai and shield in close personal combat, instead of putting their trust, as of old, in the...
